NESOTA. Remarkable Discovery Near the Head Waters of the Mississippi-Traces of for £150, and afterwards held for sale in American Pre-Historic Civilization, Paris at £800.

From the New York Herald. St. ANTHONY, MINN., Dec. 3, 1866 .-The monotony of our quiet little town ha seen considerably disturbed of late, by dis coveries of a most curious and remarkable nature, which have been made within a few lays past in our midst. They are of st ngular a character as to be beyond the pale of credence in the minds of almost every one who has not been a witness to the facts in the case; but they are vouched for by citizens of such known respectability and ve racity, that the genuineness of the state ments in regard to them is placed beyond a

A Mr. Reuben Nesmith, who lives in small house near the German Catholic Church, had occasion to go down in the cellar on the evening of the 1st Inst., to arrange a place for his winter stock of pota-toes, which he had been hauling that day from his farm, about two miles beyond Manomin. While engaged in putting together a temporary bin, and while digging to make room for the timber used in constructing it his shovel came in contact with a plate of iron, which after being cleared of earth proved to be a trap door, which was secured y a curiously wrought lock, with heavy solts running into a stone beneath. It was so much corroded by rust that a little pressure with a crowbar caused the plate to give way, and upon taking it up a opening was discovered beneath which apiral stone staircase led down the earth. Before venturing down this staircase, Mr. Nesmith communicated the fact of its discovery to hi brother-in-law, Mr. Luther Chamberlain, and having procured a lantern, the two proceeded to descend, and after going down one hundred and twenty-three steps, they found themselves in a narrow, horizonta passage, dug in the white sand, which, as every one familiar with the geological for-mation of the banks of the Upper Missisippi knows, underlies a strata of limestone. ceeding along the passage a distance of about seventy-five feet, they emerged into a spacious artificial cave, also excavated in this white sand. This cave was of an oblong form, and leading out of it were sev-eral smaller ante-chambers, all of which gave signs of having been at some former day occupied as depositories of some kind Iron and copper implements, of a rough kind of workmanship, were found scatter about, some of them evidently having bee used for excavating purposes, others for cooking utensils, the marks of fire being observable on the latter. On entering one of the small ante-chambers, a number of rude seats were found, and ppon one side of the room an elevated platform, upon which stood a roughly hewn stone, something like the reading desk of an Episcopal church On the wall behind the deak, on either side of a colossal human figure, in base relief, very curious hieroglyphics were found traced in the white sand, and an ornamental tracery of peculiar design covered the other three sides of the chamber. In the next apartment a sort of atone sarcophagus was found, upon the top of which was laid an immense rock, firmly cemented to the burial case, and which required the united fexertions of four men to remove. above referred to. A third chamber much larger in extent than the others, and the ceiling was very much like an inverted funnel in shape, directly under the apex of which was a large cube-shaped stone, which was stained wit marks of fire and some other dark substance, and a deposit of hardened ashes lay round it upon the ground. It was evi mtly used as a sacrificial altar, and th theory seeems to be confirmed by the fac that an aperture large enough to admit the body of a man opens from this apartmen to a smaller one, the floor of which is be low that of the other rooms, and which i covered with a limy powder, apparently the ashes of bones; whether human or othewise, cannot be ascertained. On con tinuing their explorations, the party found an iron plate door, which easily gave way upon a little pressure, and a passage wa out three feet in hight, and large enoug for one person to pass in a stooping posture was discovered. Mr. Nesmith and his brother-in-law followed the passage way which led in a somewhat circuitous dire tion to the vicinity of the river. This is proved by the sound of water washing upo he shore, which may be distinctly heard at the end of this passage way, the oute opening of which has apparently been filled up from the inside with broken rocks, and brough the intenstices of which fresher air han that of the cave can be felt blowing at

The whole affair is a mystery; the relic found are not at all aboriginal in character, and may have been the work of a peop existing long before even these prairie were the hunting grounds of the Indian Copies of the heiroglyphics have been care-fully transcribed and forwarded to some o he most learned archeologists of the Eastern States, and it is hoped that they may be able to obtain some clue as to the origin and use of these remarkable relics. We nderstand that the State Historical Society has made Mr. Nesmith a very liberal offer for them. In the meantime, our little town s all agog as to the discoveries, and hunlreds of people have visited the house of Mr. Nesmith to see these remarkable antiquities. We trust the Historical Society INSURANCE AGENCY. Mr. Nesmith to see these remarkable may be able to secure them as a most ineresting addition to their small but valu-

THE IRON TRADE. In 1865 there were in the "Black Coun-HOME INSURANCE COMPANY, try" 2,000 puddling furnaces, 17,000 ironvorkers, receiving about $1,000,000 per annum in wages, and producing per annum 855,000 tons of finished iron HOME INSURANCE COMPANY, The ironworkers, though rode in speech and fond of keeping Saint Monday, are kind and hospitable, and more desirous to educate their children than the col-WASHINGTON INSURANCE CO.

LOCKS AND LOCK-MAKING. The lock trade is principally centered in Wolverhampton and Willenhall, and the listrict turns out the amazing number of 31,500 dozen locks per week. The prices vary considerably. There are elaborate contrivances worth £3 a piece, and there are common padlocks at 7d a dozen. The trade is mostly in the hands of small masters, who, in the interior branches, are apt to study rapidity of production rather than excellence. A proverb says that if a Willenhall maker drops a lock he does not stop to pick it up; he can make another in se time. A master locksmith being taunted with having made some padlocks which would only lock once, replied: "It would be a shame if they did lock twice for two pence." The same locks are now sold at a half penny each! One of the lockmaking villages bears the singular name of New Invention. When there was only one house on the spot, the owner was troubled with a smoky chimney. He made an ar paratus to cure it, and was never tired of displaying his "new invention," The nickname was applied to his house, and, as other houses arose, to the entire hamlet.

THE STREL-PEN TRADE. The statistice of the steel-pen trade are rather astonishing. Ninety-eight thousand gross of pens are made weekly, consuming ten tons of steel. Some of these pens (of the barrel sort) are worth 12s. per gross, others are sold as low as 11d. per gross. Before the gross is complete one hundred and forty-four pieces of steel have been passed through at least twelve different processes, so that two hundred and eightyight distinct operations are performed for a farthing. JEWELBY. Half the gold and silver work of the London shops comes from Birmingham, though the shopkeepers don't like to acknowledge it. The value of the gold and silver consumed in Birmingham in the jewelry and other kindred trades is estimated at £1,000,000 yearly, and the precious stones and their imitations at £250,000 more. A great rise has taken place in the price of stones in the last twenty years. worth 50s, an ounce are now worth £8, and the consumption of diamonds in Birming-ham alone has increased ten-fold. The manufacture of gold and silver guard hains, though not more than forty years ld, employs fifteen hundred or sixteen idred persons. The gilt toy trade sigsifies the manufacture of personal ornaments of all decriptions, in which metals, gilt, or simply colored, are used in combination with real or imitation stones, camees, mosaics, etc. This business has re-ceived a wonderful development since the discovery of electro-gilding, and has dis-placed many French and German imporations. The low price at which such ar ticles are produced is extraordinary. ocket which in gold would be worth from fifteen shillings to thirty shillings is produced in guilt metal for a penny.

PLATED-WARE, Some interesting reminiscences are given the plated-ware trade which is now nearly extinguished by the electric pro cess. The first manufactory of plated good was established nearly one hundred years ago, by the celebrated Matthew Boulton at the Soho works. Excellence was his ain in every branch of manufacture, and the ar icles made at Soho were so richly plated that the daily use of them for forty years has scarcely made them "bleed," however, is partly due to ignorance, for i was not then known how small quan tity of silver was needed in plating Under the old process of plating (that is, before galvanic agency was used) strip of silver was taid on a corresponding slice of copper. They were bedded together on an avil with a sledge-hamme and then beated in an oven till complet union was effected. The article to be man afactured, whether it was a candlestick, pair of snuffers, or a soup ladle, was made afterwards from a piece of composite meta either by forcing it with a hammer into ar namental die of steel, or by direct ham ering, as in repousework. Electro plating has reversed the order of processes. article to be plated is cast in German silver a far harder and more intractable meta than pure copper, and is then plunged into the silvering vat. As soon at it has received its coating of silver, and has been rnished, it is ready for sale.

Electro plating was first brought into us Measur. Elkington in 1840. More than orty years before, Dr. Woolinston had ointed out that if a piece of silver in con nection with a more positive anetal, were placed in a solution of copper the silve would be coated over with the copper, and that this coating would stand the operation of burnishing; but a long time clapsed be fore a mode was discovered of depositing coating of serviceable silver in this man nor. The difficulty was at length solved by Mr. Wright, a Birmingham surgeon who obtained a deposit of firm white silver by aiding evanide of potassium to a solution of nitrate of silver. The best electr plated goods are far better than the best goods made on the old plan, but a poo electro article is inferior to the worst claof goods made under the old system.
